Seated on the poop, Ned Land and I were chatting of one thing and another as we looked at the horizon. I naturally led up the conversation to the subject of the unicorn, and examined the various chances of success or failure of the expedition. But, seeing that Ned Land let me speak without saying too much himself, I pressed him more closely. "Well, Ned, is it possible that you are not convinced of the existence of this cetacean that we are following? Have you any particular reason for being so incredulous?" The harpooner looked at me fixedly for some moments before answering, struck his forehead with his hand (a habit of his), as if to collect himself, and said at last, "Perhaps I have, Mr. Aronnax." "But, Ned, you are not. HAVE YOU ANY PARTICULAR REASON FOR BEING SO INCRECULOUS?" THE HARPOONER LOOKED AT ME FOR SOME MOMENTS BEFORE ANSWERING, STRUCK HIS BROAD FOREHEAD WITH HIS HAND (A HABIT OF HIS), AS IF TO COLLECT HIMSELF, AND SAID AT LAST, "PERHAPS I HAVE, MR. ARONNAX." "BUT, NED, YOU, A WHALER BY PROFESSION, FAMILIAR
